

Wee Nam Kee's HERITAGE

Established in 1989 in Singapore, Wee Nam Kee has been serving Hainanese Chicken Rice for the past 25 years. Starting out in Singapore's Upper Thomson district, the restaurant eventually found the cult status it enjoys today when it moved to the Novena area.

Multi-awarded and recognized by many food lovers as the authentic representation of Singapore's Hainanese Chicken Rice, Wee Nam Kee's flagship branch can now be found at United Square, still a stone's throw away from the original location. It continues to expand both domestically and internationally, with more locations planned for Singapore, the Philippines and beyond.

FOUNDER OF WEE NAM KEE

The Story of HAINANESE CHICKEN

Hainanese Chicken Rice is a dish of Chinese origin, brought to Singapore and the rest of Southeast Asia by the Chinese diaspora. The prevalence of stalls selling Hainanese Chicken Rice as their primary specialty in Singapore underscores the dish's unrivaled popularity amongst Singaporeans (and international visitors), making it one of the country's national dishes.

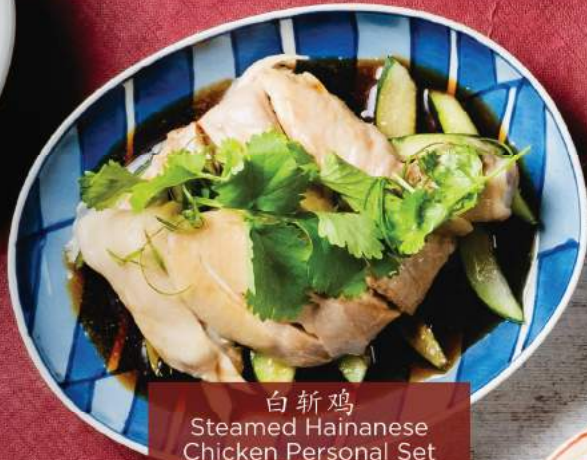

In preparing the chicken, Wee Nam Kee's traditional methods require boiling the entire bird in a flavorful chicken bone stock, seasoned with garlic, ginger and a host of other spices. The fragrant rice is made from the same rich stock and requires masterful skill in producing the perfect grain texture. Served at room temperature, the tender chicken slivers are drizzled with a light soy sauce and a secret blend of sesame oils, before being served with coriander and cucumber garnish. This dish is to be enjoyed with several dips, including chili sauce and pounded ginger, which many connoisseurs use as the basis for determining the skill and quality of the chef.
